Water Pressure Restored after Water Main Break, Water is Safe for Consumption

June 6, 2010 – Water pressure has been restored to all Cambridge residents after this weekend's water main break on Broadway and Trowbridge Street that caused disruptions to service, flooding, and road closures.

There is no need to boil water. While some discoloration of the water may appear initially, residents are encouraged to run the water until it is clear. The water has been tested and is safe for consumption.

A section of roadway near the break remains unpaved but passable and repaving is anticipated to be completed on Tuesday, June 7th.
